Household Battery Recycling Requirements Will Rapidly Expand to 61 Million Americans by 2027

Compared to fewer than one million today, at least 61 million Americans will be living in states with a recycling requirement for all household batteries by 2027. Due to additional pending or expected legislation, household battery recycling requirements could reach a total of 129 million Americans by 2027.

