Key Highlights from the Cable Management Market Report:

Cable Trays Offers Potential Growth

- A cable tray is designed to support the requirements of electric power, signal, control, instrumentation, and communication cables. They are fabricated in several styles, including wire mesh, ladder, ventilated trough, channel, and solid bottom in various sizes, to provide versatility among cable support systems.
- Cable trays are devised and installed to conform to NEMA standards, such as the NEMA VE-1 for design and NEMA VE-2 for installation. The National Electric Code dictates the requirements and limitations for cable loading. The NEMA Cable Tray Institute (CTI) was founded in 1991 to support the cable tray industry.

Europe Expected to Hold Significant Share

- With the escalated deployment of cables across multiple industries, the demand for cable management solutions is also rising. The intensified demand for networks and facilities with the massive volume of cables has grown drastically in the region.
- Multiple developed nations in Europe, such as Germany and France, have been spending substantially on infrastructure development. With these mounted investments in various sectors, enterprises are also focusing on renovating and upgrading their existing infrastructure to build better support for operations, resulting in growth in the cable management market.

What are the Latest Developments in the Cable Management Market?

- In May 2022, Chatsworth Products Inc. announced the Product Launcher Manufacturing of its ZetaFrame Cabinet in the United Kingdom. Power distribution, electronic access control, and cable management accessories are accessible for factory-installed pre-integration in CPI's ZetaFrame Cabinet, ensuring that ZetaFrame arrives at a customer's facility prepared to be populated and deployed.
